Mark A. Ozimek Speaks About Physician Contracting Issues at the University of Toledo Medical Center

TOLEDO, OHIO - Mark A. Ozimek recently presented to a group of residents at The University of Toledo Medical Center as part of its Annual Career Day event for the Emergency Medicine Residency Program. Mark's presentation was designed to help familiarize the residents with the various legal issues and concepts implicated in physician contracts. In particular, his presentation focused on employment and service agreements, non-compete provisions, malpractice insurance, Stark law, and a number of other regulatory and legal issues that physicians can expect to encounter in their medical practices. Mark was joined by a number of other local professionals who volunteered their time to present at the Annual Career Day event.

Mark is a partner at Robison, Curphey and O'Connell and is a member of the firm's Health Care Practice Group. Mark has spoken to a number of physician associations and groups on the topic of physician contracts and regularly counsels physicians and groups in the drafting and negotiation of physician contracts.
